RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

2022-2023 College of Arts & Letters one year sabbatical AY 2022-2023, to work on funded NCRC climate resilience project in eastern Oregon and Idaho.

2021-2024 The NOAA RISA collaborative, briefly referred to as the Northwest Climate Resilience Collaborative (NCRC) is an opportunity for doing field research, including potentially focus groups, with a diverse group of scientists and all people I have not worked with before. It will also improve my understanding of NOAA as an agency, since I have never received money from them before. Already, our weekly team meetings are expanding my knowledge of both interdisciplinary teamwork that includes intentionally connecting with the three components of the grant.

2021 Selected (through a competitive process) for paid assistance to get grant writing advice and revision services from the AtKisson Training Research Development Group (ISU CAL paid). I worked closely with the founder Peg AtKisson, and also participated in peer review sessions with the other selected participants.

2020 Social Science Representative for a National Science Foundation, Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (NSF EPSCoR), RII Track-2 S-STEM, "Scholarships for Chemistry and Biochemistry at Idaho State University" with Joshua Pak (PI), Caryn Evilia, Andrew Holland, and Courtney Jenkins ($999,327; not funded).

	Learned a lot about S-STEM efforts and the Chemistry department – one I had never worked with before.

- 2022 Attended the Regards to Rural conference in Pendleton, Oregon – a conference with a focus on rural vitality and environmental and social sustainability, with a consideration of equity as a priority. Both gatherings are about planning to meet growing climate-related disruptions and networking with others doing the same.
- 2020 Participated in a training on how to use the Social Explorer software to enhance my Social Statistics course, including interacting with data, creating charts, maps, reports, and summaries of often-studied indicators like crime, health, demography, the economy, health, and politics, and convinced my department to use part of its Library budget to pay the (quite reasonable) cost of access.
